

One third of GPs

are considering retiring from general practice in the next five years

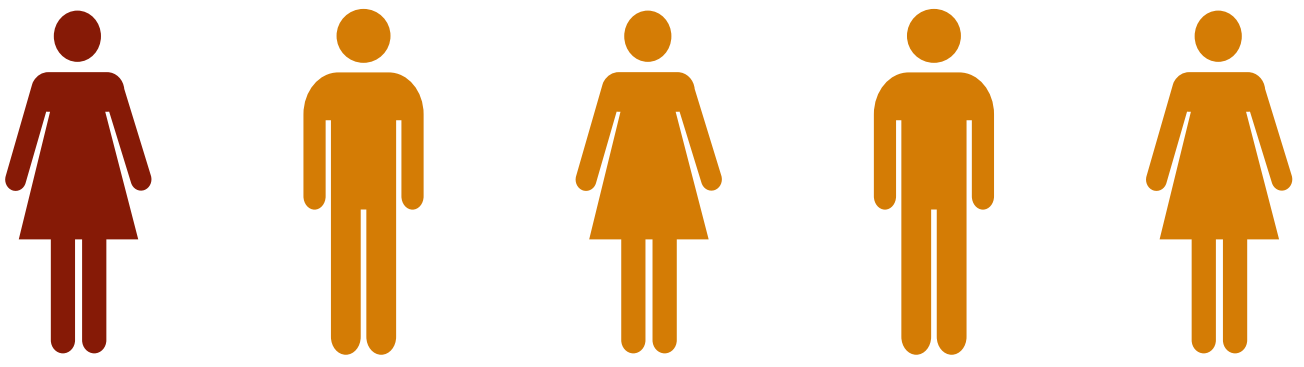

Almost three in ten

who are currently working full time said they are thinking about moving to part time

Nine per cent of all GPs

would consider moving abroad and seven percent would consider quitting medicine altogether

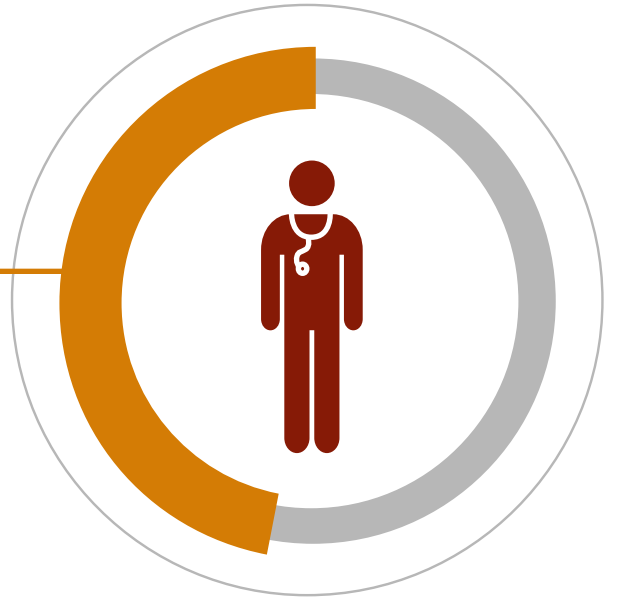

Around one in five (19%)

GP trainees – the youngest cohort in the profession – are considering working abroad before 2020

Despite the pressures...

Just under half (47%)

would recommend a career as a GP

But one third (35%) would not advocate working in general practice
