Nationality and Borders Bill
House of Lords, Committee Stage
27 January 2021

About the BMA
The BMA is a professional association and trade union representing and negotiating on behalf of all doctors and medical students in the UK. It is a leading voice advocating for outstanding health care and a healthy population. It is an association providing members with excellent individual services and support throughout their lives.

Key points

- The BMA calls on peers to support Lord Paddick’s amendment to oppose Clause 11 of the Bill, which would create a two-tier system for asylum seekers based on their mode of travel to the UK. The policy creates unnecessary barriers for enabling refugees, including health care professionals, to contribute to British society and risks leaving individuals vulnerable to exploitation and trafficking.¹

- The BMA has significant concern over proposals relating to accommodation centres in Clause 12 of the Bill. The proposals would expand the use of accommodation schemes, such as the use of military facilities and hostel-style accommodation, that have been proven to have a detrimental impact on mental and physical health.² We urge peers to support amendments that would scrap the expansion of institutional accommodation schemes, and ensure asylum seekers are housed in humane conditions with accessible healthcare.

- The BMA calls on peers to support Lord Rosser’s amendment to oppose Clause 28 of the Bill that would allow the offshoring of people seeking asylum in the UK while their claims are being considered. International examples of offshoring have been found to contribute towards health problems, limit access to medical care and have been declared “unlawful” by the International Criminal Court’s Prosecutor. We set out our concerns over both offshoring and the expansion of institutional accommodation centres in a joint letter to the Home Secretary highlighting the significant negative health implications of such measures.

- The BMA also calls on peers to support Lord Anderson’s amendment to oppose Clause 9 of the Bill, which would enable the Secretary of State to deprive UK nationals of citizenship without notice. Citizenship is a right not a privilege and we see the clause as a breach of a fundamental principle of the rule of law. As a minimum, individuals must be given notice of a decision before their rights are adversely affected.

- The BMA has serious concerns about the Bill’s potential for ionising radiation to be used for assessing the age of asylum seekers. Our concerns about the provisions on ‘scientific methods’ in Clause 51 were raised with the Government by MPs, and now we’re urging Peers to question these measures further. In particular, the Government’s belief that Clause 51’s safeguards would address our ethical concerns³.

---

¹ The Guardian (May 2021) [We thank your government for our full pockets’ – Calais smugglers speak]
² The Red Cross (2021) [Far from a home: Why asylum support accommodation needs reform]
³ Read the Minister’s contribution here: https://hansard.parliament.uk/commons/2021-11-02/debates/e555699e-7968-4df5-bd34-09063d837246/NationalityAndBordersBill[FourteenthSitting]#contribution-6AAS814-EEA8-4B53-B05F-75AS292E41C7
Clause 9 - Notice of decision to deprive a person of citizenship

The BMA opposes the inclusion of a clause to retrospectively deprive somebody of their citizenship with particular concern that this could be achieved without notice. This clause would apply to those with a tie to another country and disproportionately impact those of migrant heritage. We know the Windrush scandal placed a huge strain on the health and wellbeing of those affected and their families and we would not wish to see it repeated. The knowledge that citizenship could even be revoked without any warning will inevitably lead to stress and anxiety amongst a community that is already vulnerable.

Citizenship is a right not a privilege and we see the clause as a breach of a fundamental principle of the rule of law. As a minimum, individuals must be given notice of a decision before their rights are adversely affected.

Despite considerable concern over the proposals raised at Report Stage by both sides of the House, proposals to deprive people of citizenship without notice have not been amended. The BMA urges peers to rectify this and support Lord Anderson’s amendment to remove Clause 9 from the Bill.

Clause 11 – Differential treatment of refugees

The BMA has significant concern over Clause 11 of the Nationality and Borders Bill which would create a two-tier system for asylum seekers based on their mode of arrival to the UK. Those who arrive by a means other than via a resettlement programme risk having their claim dismissed or being given temporary asylum status with significant restrictions on family life and financial support. Under the proposals, the Home Office will attempt to remove them to another safe country and they could face criminal charges and a four-year prison sentence for ‘entering illegally’. The UNHCR has stressed that creating two different classes of recognised refugees is inconsistent with the Refugee Convention and has no basis in international law.

Whilst we do not know what proportion of refugee health and care professionals arrive to the UK via irregular means, the Bill creates unnecessary barriers for enabling refugees to contribute to British society and risks leaving individuals vulnerable to exploitation and trafficking.

Many of the refugees who thrive in our communities today, such as Dr Waheed Arian, now an NHS doctor who fled forced conscription to the Taliban as a child and made an irregular journey, would be potentially expelled under the provisions in the Bill, instead of offered the protection and opportunity this country has historically provided.

The BMA supports the development of a single, fair, humane and effective refugee system, in keeping with our obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law, including rights to necessary and appropriate health care irrespective of an individual’s route into the UK.

Health implications of temporary status

Under the Bill, refugees who arrive in the UK by an irregular route would only be eligible to receive a new form or temporary protection, which would be valid for 30 months. People holding this status would have limited rights to settlement in the UK and to reunification with family who remain overseas. Those with temporary protection status would also be under No Recourse to Public Funds (NRPF) conditions. Evidence

---

4 UNHCR (October 2021) UNHCR legal observations on the Nationality and Borders Bill
5 The Guardian (May 2021) ‘We thank your government for our full pockets’ – Calais smugglers speak’
shows that individuals under NRPF conditions are prevented from receiving adequate income and housing, which can force families into destitution, further exacerbating health inequalities in the UK.

Extended periods of uncertainty faced by asylum seekers in the UK and the NRPF condition already contribute to poor health. Increasing the uncertainty under which people who have fled violence and trauma live will only increase their psychological distress, with the potential to create or compound underlying physical conditions linked to chronic stress, anxiety and depression. Clinicians who care for refugees and asylum seekers also sight concern about family members left behind as a substantial source of poor mental health, and reducing the already limited rights of refugees in this regard would be detrimental.

The addition of a temporary protection status for some refugees will also exacerbate existing complexity over entitlement to NHS care in the UK and risks deepening exclusion from healthcare for vulnerable groups.

Although refugees and asylum seekers are entitled to free care on the NHS, the system is complex and asylum seekers can move in and out of entitlement depending on the status of their claim or appeal, their degree of vulnerability and whether they have dependent children under 18. As a consequence, many experience blockages when registering with a GP or face being incorrectly denied/charged for secondary care due to confusion over their entitlement. A survey of BMA members found that 55% of doctors who work with refugees and asylum seekers were frequently or sometimes uncertain about their entitlement to care.

Some refused asylum seekers with NRPF may be eligible to receive treatment for certain conditions free of charge, or receive local authority support where there is a medical need. Doctors play a key role in identifying these cases and advocating on behalf of particularly vulnerable individuals. However, the excessive complexity of the current system of NHS entitlements and charging deters appropriate use of the healthcare system, wastes the valuable time of medical professionals and has a detrimental impact on individual and public health.

The BMA urges peers to support Lord Paddick’s amendment to oppose Clause 11 and instead support the development of a single, fair, humane and effective refugee system, in keeping with our obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law.

Clause 12 - Accommodation for asylum seekers etc.

In December, the BMA joined other healthcare organisations in writing a joint letter to the Home Secretary raising concern over the health implications of the Bill, particularly in relation to offshoring and expanding institutional accommodation centres.

---

9 British Red Cross (2017) Can’t stay. Can’t go. Refused asylum seekers who cannot be returned
11 Asylum support appeals project (2016) Section 4 support
12 The Equality and Human Rights Commission (2018) The lived experiences of access to healthcare for people seeking and refused asylum
13 BMA (2019) Refugee and asylum seeker patient health toolkit
14 BMA (2018) Delayed, deterred, and distressed: The impact of NHS overseas charging regulations on patients and the doctors who care for them
Clause 12 would give Government powers to expand asylum accommodation schemes, such as the use of military facilities and hostels, that have a detrimental impact on physical and mental health. A British Red Cross investigation found that unsuitable and poor facilities were having a severe impact on the wellbeing of asylum seekers, including children.

People housed in asylum accommodation are generally not registered with a GP, and therefore face significant challenges in accessing appropriate healthcare, particularly for more complex mental and physical health conditions. People who are not registered with a GP and do not have an NHS number are also unable to access Covid-19 vaccines through regular channels, making them largely dependent on outreach and walk-in clinics, which poses a challenge for timely follow-up and identification of those who need additional doses as a result of clinical vulnerability.

Where people living in asylum accommodation are able to register with a local GP practice, this can place a significant burden on local health services as practices may need to register and provide care for a large number of patients, often with complex health issues, in a short period of time. Given this, and in the context of NHS services facing enormous pressure due to the ongoing pandemic and unprecedented backlog of care, the scale of planned new reception centres intended to house thousands of people is deeply concerning.

The BMA has previously written to the Home Secretary and Health Secretary calling for an end to the use of institutional accommodation to house asylum seekers. In June 2021, a High Court judgment in a case brought by six asylum seekers who had been housed in the Napier Barracks in Kent found inadequate health and safety conditions, a failure to screen victims of trafficking and other vulnerabilities, and false imprisonment of residents. Evidence presented to the court showed the Home Office continued to house people at the barracks against advice from Public Health England. A Covid outbreak was found by the court to be “inevitable” and did in fact occur in January 2021, with nearly 200 people testing positive.

The BMA urges peers to support amendments to the Bill that would scrap the use of MoD facilities for housing asylum seekers, and that would ensure asylum seekers are housed in humane conditions with accessible healthcare. We are supportive of Lord Etherton’s amendment that would ensure any accommodation provided to asylum seekers or refugees who arrive in the UK will be situated in the UK and that the accommodation conforms to the standards laid out in the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). We also support critical amendments tabled by Baroness Lister that would limit the number of days asylum seekers can be held in accommodation centres to 90 days, restrict the number of people in any centre to no more than 100 and ensure certain vulnerable groups cannot be housed in new accommodation centres.

Clause 28 and Schedule 3 – Removal of asylum seeker to safe country

The BMA is strongly opposed to Government proposals to send people seeking asylum in the UK abroad while their claims are being considered.

---

16 The Red Cross (2021) Far from a home: Why asylum support accommodation needs reform

17 Written evidence submitted to Home Affairs Committee by Doctors of the World UK, the Helen Bamber Foundation, Forrest Medico-Legal Services and Freedom from Torture, available at https://committees.parliament.uk/writtenevidence/22982/html/

19 Royal Courts of Justice (June 2021) Napier Barracks judgement
The use of offshoring has previously led to asylum seekers being accommodated in countries where they are unable to access medical care they may need and has had a detrimental impact on the mental health of asylum seekers affected. This is evident in problems created by Australia’s offshoring of asylum seekers to countries like Manus Island in Papa New Guinea, which the UN has declared “violates the convention against torture” and the ICC prosecutor has described “unlawful”.

The BMA strongly calls on peers to support Lord Rosser’s Amendment to oppose the implementation of offshoring as set out within the Bill.

Clause 51 – use of ionising radiation for age assessment

The BMA has serious concerns about the use of ionising radiation for the age assessment of asylum seekers, which MPs highlighted to the Government at the Bill’s Committee Stage. Regrettably, our concerns were not allayed during the Commons’ debates on the Bill. Our understanding is that the Government intends to keep ionising radiation open as an option for verifying the age of asylum seekers - whether through:

1) methods to be specified in future regulations under “imaging technology” in new clause 51, after the Secretary of State has sought “scientific advice”; or
2) a “pre-existing legal position”, preserved by Clause 51(9) of this Bill, for decision-makers to use scientific methods of age assessment that are not specified in regulations under this Bill.

Regarding 1), we urge Peers to ask:

- The Home Office recently announced a new science advisory committee for this purpose, which will “comprise a range of expertise, including medical practitioners, academics, scientists and social workers”. How will these individuals be selected? Will they come from professional bodies? Will the committee include ethical experts? Will the committee be independent of government? What criteria will the committee use to examine whether a scientific method is an appropriate age assessment method? Will they consult relevant stakeholders? Will an update be provided to Parliament before the Secretary of State acts on the scientific advice?

Regarding 2), we urge Peers to ask:

- If a future use of ionising radiation for age assessment is justified via a “pre-existing legal route”, rather than specified in regulations under this Bill, what safeguards would apply – as those in Clause 51 would only apply to methods set out in regulations? How are the BMA’s ethical concerns being addressed? Would there be any scrutiny of, or consultation on, methods that are not specified in regulations? What is meant by “if the decision maker considers it appropriate”?

The BMA has serious concerns about the use of ionising radiation for the age assessment of asylum seekers, which MPs highlighted to the Government at the Bill’s Committee Stage. Regrettably, our concerns were not allayed during the Commons’ debates on the Bill. Our understanding is that the Government intends to keep ionising radiation open as an option for verifying the age of asylum seekers - whether through:

1) methods to be specified in future regulations under “imaging technology” in new clause 51, after the Secretary of State has sought “scientific advice”; or
2) a “pre-existing legal position”, preserved by Clause 51(9) of this Bill, for decision-makers to use scientific methods of age assessment that are not specified in regulations under this Bill.

Regarding 1), we urge Peers to ask:

- The Home Office recently announced a new science advisory committee for this purpose, which will “comprise a range of expertise, including medical practitioners, academics, scientists and social workers”. How will these individuals be selected? Will they come from professional bodies? Will the committee include ethical experts? Will the committee be independent of government? What criteria will the committee use to examine whether a scientific method is an appropriate age assessment method? Will they consult relevant stakeholders? Will an update be provided to Parliament before the Secretary of State acts on the scientific advice?

Regarding 2), we urge Peers to ask:

- If a future use of ionising radiation for age assessment is justified via a “pre-existing legal route”, rather than specified in regulations under this Bill, what safeguards would apply – as those in Clause 51 would only apply to methods set out in regulations? How are the BMA’s ethical concerns being addressed? Would there be any scrutiny of, or consultation on, methods that are not specified in regulations? What is meant by “if the decision maker considers it appropriate”?

The use of ionising radiation for age assessment involves direct harms without any medical benefit to the individual and, as such, we do not believe it would be appropriate to expect doctors to participate in such a practice.

The focus of Clause 51 seems to be about the creation of a new category of scientific methods for age assessment that cannot be reasonably rejected without “damaging the age-disputed person’s credibility”; safeguards are only considered under this lens.

---

20 The Guardian (October 2021) ‘Australia to end offshoring in Papa New Guinea’
21 MPs raising our concerns at the Bill’s Committee Stage can be read here (2 Nov 2021): https://bit.ly/3FHw6Jh
22 The Government’s response to concerns from the BMA and others can be read here (2 Nov 2021): https://bit.ly/3r0nd9t
23 Letter from the Government to the Public Bill Committee, further to concerns raised about New Clause 32 - now known as Clause 51 - can be read here (4 Nov 2021): https://bit.ly/3DH7akx
We urge Peers to use the important amendments tabled by Baroness Lister to Clause 51 to raise the questions above and press for a clearer response from the Government to our ethical concerns.

January 2021

For further information on the BMA’s position on Clause 51, please contact:
Holly Weldin, Senior Public Affairs Officer
E: hweldin@bma.org.uk

For further information on the BMA’s view on other aspects of the Bill, please contact:
Leah Miller, Senior Public Affairs Officer
E: lmiller@bma.org.uk